CRAZY, BUT BRILLIANT

It's crazy what technology can do these days.

Anyone who complains about AI should really try it out first and see how useful it can be for them personally.

Every morning after waking up, I used to spend about half an hour scrolling through social media to see what was new. I don't do that anymore. Instead, I use my AI to get information, and at the same time I hand over new tasks, my thoughts and ideas. That easily saves me at least half a day of things I would otherwise have done by hand.

It's also sustainable for the future of my business, because I've automated and optimized so many things with it. At the same time, my error rate has dropped significantly, and I get things done faster than ever before.

So I could now stay in bed at least half an hour longer every morning. Of course I don't. Instead, I look at other meaningful tasks.

Truly crazy, but brilliant.

And no, I hardly type anything anymore. I dictate everything, have it transcribed and then have a PDF or image made, just like this one.

Karl Schnürch

Germany, 2026