BIRTHDAY

While I'm singing, screaming, dreaming, there are millions of moments and more when I'm thinking of you, my dear and so loved ...

I know it isn't our time, so the only little thing I can do is send you this rhyme.

My love, my feelings, my thoughts for you are deeper than every sea, even though I know that right now there isn't really, really a we.

I'm so, so glad and happy that I met you and got to know you some years ago.
Whenever we're in touch, my head is spinning, my heart is jumping, and my soul tries to touch and dance with yours, you know.

I'm patient and waiting, and I don't put any pressure on you, because a time will come when we belong to each other, I already know.

So for now I just wish, and all I can say:
all the very best and the greatest happy birthday.

Karl Schnürch

Seychelles, 2024